Yet the steamer companies originally guaranteed against all war risks! A further question may arise if the rice becomes mildewed in the godowns: who is to make good this loss? So immense a quantity of rice cannot be dried in the sun, and if wet weather ensues matters will be still worse. Best arrange peaceful settlement and so allow the stored up rice to be sent forward to Tientsin. The Com? missioners at Tientsin will probably have to consent to some modification of the original agreement with the foreign steamer companies.

Mr. Jones-Mr. Chairman, before we part. may I ask if you have any advices from Perak? The CHAIRMAN-We have advices acknow. ledging the receipt of instructions sent down to commence the new system of working from Mr. tributaries at work, and that Messrs. Stallard and Hooper were then about to proceed to Chunduriong in a few days. That was on the 16th of last month. They would probably have arrived about the 20th of last month and commenced work at that place. We have letters from both of them acknowledging their instructions to go there, and undertaking to carry out their instructions to the best of their abilities. Beyond that we have nothing further to say except that the work is being carried out by the officers as rapidly as they can. It will be some time before we can possibly hear of any results of the working of the system; but the system

It is said there are this overcost for that mines meat just at the 80,000 women in London who are street walkers. .- Pall Mall Garette. Under the gleam of the gas lamps you'll find them, Beflaunting their shame in its merciless flare; Trying to drown all the thoughts which remind them That they have ever been happy and fair. Choking their sighs with loud shouts of forced laughter; Trusting to drams, broodings dark to dispurse: Daring to hope there will be no hereafter, As their and present they bitterly curse ! But as you look on them grant them your pity; Think of their suffering more than their sin; Think of their lot in this hard-hearted city, Think of the terrible toils they are in ! Aye, as they walk in their brazen-faced shamelessne Let not their unblushing boldness appal; Try to recall the glad days of their blamelessness-& Somebody's Daughters" they are after all "Somebody's Daughters!" aye, Sisters and Brothers, Be this your thought as this flesh mart you pace; E'on as they sin here, perchance their fond mothers, Pray for their souls with hot tears on their face. Hark! Can you not hear the wail of their weeping? As all too weary with watching, alack, Mothers who, maybe, lone vigils are keeping Yearn but to welcome their predigals back | Think of the days when, their life all before them, Kneeling they prayed at a fond mother's knee! When too that mother bent lovingly o'er them, Praying herself they might happiness see. Think of their merriment too and their prattle, When they were yet in the playtime of life; Ere they, exposed to the stress of its battle, Fell in its flerce and most pitiless strife! Shut out the scenes which the gas-glare discloses, Bidding your mind's eye a moment to roam, Back to the cottage where, bower'd in red roses, Yonder poor girl had her once happy home. Pure as the flowers of the spring were her fancies, When she kept tryst at the ivy-clad stile; Now there's a flack of harsh scorn in her glances, And on her lips is a sinister smile. Take her aside though, and talk of her mother, Speak of the home that in anguish she left; And bitter sobs all her accents will smother As she tells how of all hope she's hereft. Till as you talk of her casement where roses And white stars of jasmine at day-dawn would peer She her hot hand over yours tightly closes, And can do nothing but silently weep. "Somebody's Daughters!" then think of them kindly Let your coft heart by their sorrows be stirred; Punished perchance for once loving too blindly, Ruined for trusting a villain's false word! What they are now, that is seen but too clearly. Try to imagine then what they have been; Ere that sad stop which they pay for so dearly Forced them to flaunt in this terrible scene. Thank God there are those who despite opposition Give our lost sisters that chance of reform, Which they by score in their wretched condition Readily seize with a gratitude warm. Good has been done, but our streets are still teaming and fired it down on the table. "Got an Premature Old Age, caused by Excesses, Over-With those who ve lost all their sex holds most dear.
